Workers Compensation

In Mississippi, workers compensation is required if a business has at least five employees. Injuries at work can cause devastating losses and create precarious situations at work and at home. After you are an injury on the job, the employer or its insurance company is to provide medical benefits for you. After missing so many days of work, the company is required to pay you benefits referred to as TTD (temporary total benefits). You should keep receiving benefits as long as a doctor requires you to stay home.

Upon return to work, the company should give you your exact job back, or -if your injuries were disabling - provide a job modified to your specific needs. If the company cannot provide you a job, it must keep paying you. After medical treatment has ended, you may be entitled to a lump sum amount or maybe even further medical benefits.

I want to see you get the medical attention you deserve and make sure you are getting what you are entitled with the benefits of workers compensation. If you need help, contact my office.
